My first move was to send for the son, to see if he desired to carry out his agreement, He came into my office in a swaggering, defiant way, having a revolver buckled to him and three drinks of whisky behind his vest buttons. He cursed the mother, me, the law and all else, and wound up with:

his head. "I m in this case to the bit-ter end, and whenever you feel like-shooting don't wait for me to begin." Bill was a boaster and a coward. He turned white as flour and became as humble as a lamb. He went out of the office like a car, but I know the feeling office like a cur, but I knew the feeling raging in his heart, and I realized that he would bring about my death if he could do it with safety to himself. I could do it with safety to himself. I had the proper papers served and the suit opened. Bill made his threats and boasts, but kept clear of me, I expected he would fill up some day and come into town for a shooting scrape, but he had another plan to work qn. We had a sure case, as his friends informed me, but he was determined to bluster it out.

My office was over a store, and reach My office was over a store, and reached by outside stairs. There was a front and a back room, and the latter, I being a bachelor, was used for my bedroom. It was the fashion to leave all doors open during the day, and when I left my office on an errand, or to go to court, it was not locked. When it became known around that I had taken came known around that I had taken Mrs. Sharon's case and bluffed her son Bill I had plenty of small business to look after, and was much of the time in One day just before the big suit was to come to trial I went into court on an ordinary suit and was decreased for the court of the cour

Next moment Bill Sharon came rushing down the narrow stairs hatless, eyes staring from their sockets, and such a look of terror on his face as I never saw before or since. He rushed past us, shrieking and yelling, and it was only when he was clear of us that we made out the horrible truth. Two great rattlesnakes were hanging to hir one by the right wrist and the other by the right leg. They squirmed and twisted and flopped as he ran, and his screams and exclamations brought out the whole town. He ran about a block and then lay down in the street and rolled over and over, and the snakes let go of him and were killed as they crawled away.

THE BITER BIT.

Wild Tale in Which Revolvers, Ratt About fifteen years ago I set up shop as a lawyer in a young town in Nebraska, and the very first case that came to me was one to delight a lawyor's heart. An aged woman named Mary Sharon had deeded all her property to her son William, on the understanding that he was to support her and do-so-and-so during the rest of her life. After a year or two he became anxious to get rid of her, being vigorously encouraged by his wife, and matters were made so hot for the old lady that she could no longer stay in the house. Indeed, she was turned out of it, and but for the charity of neighbors would have died of hunof neighbors would have died of huntermined to become her counsel, Bill or

"Now, then, you go ahead. The minute you make trouble for me I'll make a corpse of you."

"And now you look here," I answered, as I brought a six-shooter to cover his head. "I'm in this case to the bitter and and whenever you feel like."
